Welcome to the Face to Face Congress

The University of Portsmouth Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences and the European Network of Qualitative Inquiry welcome you to the face to face congress. We are pleased to offer a hybrid option for scholars to present their work and want to create an affirmative and positive space to facilitate this. The congress theme is “Qualitative Inquiry in the Anthropocene: Affirmative and generative possibilities for (Post)Anthropocentric futures” and the papers and posters in this programme reflect the importance of how qualitative inquiry offers new potential for resistance and change. We ask presenters and attendees to read the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences congress ethos statement below and take these points into consideration as you take part in both the online and face to face congress. If you have any concerns over any ethical issues that might arise as part of these presentations please address these to ECQI2023@port.ac.uk.

Ethos statement

We want to provide you with a safe and engaging space to present, engage and network with both established academics, early career academics and students who are at various stages of their research journey. In order to keep the spaces in this conference safe and comfortable for all attendees, all have been appointed a session Chair.

To enable us to keep spaces respectful, we ask you to:

- Please ensure all questions are in the spirit of the collaborative and collegial nature of the conference.
- The chair will ensure that questions are asked from the whole room and will maintain as much balance as possible with respect to gender and seniority of question-askers.
- In the case of providing feedback, please do so in a constructive manner.

Thank you!

Nikki, Emma, Jessica, Megan, Anisa, Jennifer and Claire

Locations: University of Portsmouth

The 6th European Congress of Qualitative Inquiry will be held in a number of adjacent buildings. The main registration desk and hub for the congress will be in the Portland Building (number 2 on the map below). The pre-congress workshops will be held in the Richmond Building (number 6 on the map), the keynotes will be in the Portland Building, and the papers, game changer and dream teams will be in Portland Building, Richmond Building, and Dennis Sciama Building (number 9). All buildings can be found on google maps, just type their name in and you can get directions of how to find them.

All these buildings are in close proximity to facilitate easy movement between sessions.
